1. INTRODUCTION

Depuis toujours, la coopération entre les universités du Nord et celles de la zone du Sahel doivent tenir compte d'environnement difficile. La coopération qu'entretient depuis de longues années l'Université allemande de Sciences Administratives Appliquées de Kehl (USAAK) avec ses universités partenaires, l'Université de Sciences Juridiques et Politiques de Bamako (USJPB) et l'Université Abdou Moumouni de Niamey (UAMN) évoluent dans ce contexte.

Coopération interuniversitaire avec les pays du Sahel - entre faiblesses structurelles et adaptation au contexte

The article "Coopération interuniversitaire avec les pays du Sahel - entre faiblesses structurelles et adaptation au contexte" discusses the challenges and necessary adaptations in inter-university cooperation between universities of the Global North and universities in Sahelian countries. It highlights structural weaknesses in these partnerships, examining how universities can tailor strategies to the specific geopolitical and socio-economic context of the Sahel. This cooperation aims to enhance local resilience, strengthen institutional capacities, and foster relevant academic exchange, despite the region's security and development challenges.

L'article « Coopération interuniversitaire avec les pays du Sahel - entre faiblesses structurelles et adaptation au contexte » examine les défis et les adaptations nécessaires pour les partenariats interuniversitaires entre les universités du Nord et celles de la zone du Sahel. Il met en lumière les faiblesses structurelles dans ces collaborations et explore comment les universités peuvent ajuster leurs stratégies au contexte géopolitique et socio-économique de la région. L'objectif est de renforcer la résilience locale et les capacités institutionnelles malgré les difficultés sécuritaires et de développement.
