CENTRAL AFRICAN TIME

This course helps students identify the expected goals of the components of a formal research proposal and supports them in writing up their research in a coherent way. It guides them towards demonstrating an intended, well-structured study and a critical declaration of their positionality as researchers

The course consists of self-directed learning on the Moodle platform and six Zoom sessions (with 5 of them being in one week).

WHAT WE EXPECT

- Participation in 6 Zoom sessions (approx. 2 hours each)
- Completion of the activities on Moodle
- Engagement in 2 additional hours per week (in your own time)

REQUIREMENTS FOR REGISTRATION

- Participant must be a post-graduate student writing their proposal
- Or participant must be a post-graduate student writing up their research
- Or participant could be a supervisor overseeing a post-graduate research program

This module is for lecturers, facilitators, tutors and academic supervisors who want to learn how to use Moodle for online teaching and learning.

This course aims to introduce participants from the DIGI-FACE centres to the Online Classroom, also called the Learning Management System (LMS). Moodle is the LMS used to host the DIGIFACE learning site. It's a very commonly used opensource platform used by many universities around the world. In this course you will learn how to use Moodle both as i) a student, and ii) a lecturer.
